

DIRECTION 1A – “THE INSTITUTE”

Restrained, authoritative, business-school register.

Four screens from the accepted visual direction for the TTLI LMS: serif display type, hairline borders, no border radii in the underlying design, and a single accent — the real TTLI brand red already recorded in the brand-identity extraction and applied to the tenant theme.

- Primary #8E151C
- Bright #BC222A
- Ink #16191B
- Surface #E6E7E8

Foundations

Type scale, colour tokens and component primitives the other three screens are built from.

FOUNDATIONS

Restraint, and one red that does all the work.

Serif for anything a learner reads as a statement; grotesque for anything they act on; mono for anything the system asserts as fact — times, IDs, amounts, states. The brand red is reserved for primary action and current position. Nothing else gets to be red.

COLOUR — FROM THE LIVE SITE'S CSS

Primary · action, current position	#8E151C
Bright · hover, active nav	#BC222A
Ink · wordmark, headings	#16191B
Neutral grey · footer, hover blocks	#BCBEC0
Light grey · fills	#E6E7E8

#F6F4EF paper	#3E6B4F pass	#8A6E2E pending
--------------------------	-------------------------	----------------------------

Pass and pending are additions — the site publishes no semantic colours, and a red-only palette can't distinguish "certified" from "failed". Both sit at the brand's chroma.

The site names no typeface, so this is a proposal, not an extraction — Newsreader for its low-contrast, readable serif at display sizes; Archivo for a neutral grotesque that doesn't fight it.

Trust as a measurable asset

LESSON 4 OF 6 · PRINCIPLE THREE

Overview Transcript Resources 3 Discussion 12

Trust is usually discussed as a feeling and therefore treated as unmanageable. This lesson reframes it as a measurable asset with three observable components — reliability, disclosure and repair — and gives you the instrument we use to score each one across a team.

Before you continue: the reflection assignment asks for a trust score for your own team. Have last quarter's engagement results to hand.

Progress is verified

The player reports watched segments every 15 seconds. Skipping ahead, tab-switching for long stretches and playback above 1.5x don't count toward completion.
